

Descriptions of some of the more common aliens.

Greys

Most common of the EBE's seen on earth. The standard Gray stands about 3-4ft tall, generally having a Gray/white complexion. Most notable are the extremely large ovular eyes, lack of a nose per say, slit mouth, and large over sized ovular head. Possible reasoning for this appearance? These traits may be the result of evolutionary development in their own star system.

Lets explore this possibility for just a moment. Firstly the large black ovular eyes are generally the product of a species being nocturnal. The blackness of the eyes allows for the absorption of all available light thus giving the species better nocturnal sight. Second the eyes are orientated front allowing for stereoscopic vision, thus generating depth perception. The large head may be a result of the shrinkage of the body but not the brain, or could be a result of protein deficiency. This type of mal-formation can be seen extensively throughout the third world. The nose may be a result not need the nasal sensory capability anymore, thus the nose becomes a vestigial organ and shrinks, same with the mouth and ears. Finally the lack of a digestive track, produced through the genetic engineering of their bodies to produce a feeding mechanism that requires the absorption of protein through the skin.

Reptilians

These Aliens are proportional in size to modern humans. They have a snake like or lizard appearance. The information about these creatures varies from source to source. Supposedly they consider Earth their ancient outpost and want to have complete control over it because their planet is becoming unable to adequately support life. The Greys are supposedly subservient to the Reptilians

Nordics

The Nordics are a race of Alien visitors that share common features. They look very similar to the average human except a little taller and heavier. They are reported, by people who have seen them, to be very muscular and in excellent physical shape. They derive their name from the fact that they resemble the Scandinavians.

Many of the encounters that occur with these aliens seem to be pleasant. People report that the Nordics are here to somehow watch over and help guide us into a new plane of existence. Others report that the Nordics have had some kind of conflict with the Greys in the past.